—Buy some Christmas seals.

—What this country needs is more companionate cooks.

—Our telephone numbers are: Editorial rooms, 581; Business office, 782. Give us a ring.

—Got alcohol in your car's radiator? You'll need it, with the temperature dropping the way it is.

—Evangeline Booth has gone to Chicago. You'll find the Salvation Army wherever there is bloodshed.

—Oh, yes, are you using the classified ads in this newspaper? A cent a word tells your story, and may mean big money to you.

—B-r-r! How do you like these chilly blasts in Circleville last night and this morning? Well, we gotta expect it.

—Watch the rush of pedestrians and shoppers for the next three weeks. Golly we pity the poor Circleville clerks. They'll all be worn out by Dec. 25th.

—Maybe things are breaking hard for you, but just think of Solomon. Whenever he went out at night, he heard "Don't be late, now," six hundred times.

—Circleville folks are warned that this is the time of year when the house-to-house salesman redoubles his attempts to sell his articles for more than they are worth. He's hoping to capitalize on the Christmas spirit.

—There's always a new gag on the new Ford. And at Williamsport, Wednesday night, the minstrel troupe from Mt. Sterling pulled a good one. One of the "dark, brown boys" said that he had been delayed appearing at the auditorium because the new Ford was out and he was up town watching the accidents.

—Noticed an empty Christmas, saying envelope on the pavement in Circleville this morning. Some chap was in such a hurry to get it open that he dropped it and then probably ran to spend it. These Christmas saving checks come in handy right at this season, believe me!

LEGION TO HAVE YULETIDE TREE

War Veterans Planning Christmas Eve Celebration For Children of Circleville.

The annual community Christmas tree placed in the court house yard by the Howard Hall Post No. 134, of the American Legion, will again delight the children of Circleville this year, according to the announcement made Thursday by Edward Ebert, chairman of the Legion's arrangement committee for the tree.

After extensive negotiations the committee has been able to plan for a pre-Christmas visit of Santa Claus to Circleville, and he will preside at the tree when a thousand bags of candy, nuts and fruits are distributed among the boys and girls of the city.

The celebration will take place on Saturday night, Dec. 24, and because Santa's packs will be all packed for his midnight visits, the Legion committee will provide gifts for the children.

The money for the candy, fruits, nuts and other goodies will be obtained from the solicitation of Circleville business and professional men by a committee headed by Mack Parrett, Jr. The solicitors will start their work this week.

Other members of the Legion committee, in addition to Mr. Ebert and Mr. Parrett, are Lawrence Johnson, George Cook, George Mast and Karl Herrmann.

HONOR DINNER FOR TEEGARDIN FRIDAY NIGHT

Farm Bureau Arranges Program at St. Paul For Master Farmer of Duval.

Elaborate preparations are being made by the Pickaway County Farm Bureau for a dinner in the Lutheran Community house at St. Paul on Friday night honoring C. B. Teegardin, of Duval, who, with Walter J. Marion, of Circleville township, was chosen as one of the 15 Master Farmers in Ohio this year. The dinner will be similar to the one given in Circleville Monday night at which Mr. Marion was honored by the Chamber of Commerce and the Farm Bureau.

Harley Himes, of Walnut township, will be the toastmaster Friday night and he will introduce the members of the Teegardin family. J. R. Noecker, of Circleville, will speak on "The Boyhood Days of Mr. Teegardin." W. E. Sitterly, of Fairfield county, will speak on "Farm Insurance."

The two principal speakers of the occasion will be L. L. Rummell, field editor of The Ohio Farmer, on "What is a Master Farmer?" and Dr. Carl Jay, of the department of animal husbandry, Ohio State university.

Among the other speakers will be E. A. Snyder, cashier of the Ashville Banking company, who will tell of Mr. Teegardin's business ability; John Bragg, of Circleville, former county farm agent; Rev. Mr. Winterhoff, pastor of the St. Paul Lutheran church, and Walter J. Marion, who will welcome Mr. Teegardin.

The dinner will be served by the women of the Lutheran church and a vocal and instrumental musical program has been arranged. All the tickets for the dinner have been sold.

SALTER DISPOSES OF CIGAR STORE

Safety Director Sells Establishment To Homer Wolf Because of Ill Health.

C. E. Salter, safety director, has disposed of his store, The Scioto Valley Cigar company to Homer Wolf and Company. Homer Wolf took charge of the store on South Court street Thursday morning.

Mr. Salter has been in the business of manufacturing and selling cigars and tobacco for the past 28 years. He made cigars for G. M. Van Heyde, and later became associated with the L. M. Long and Company on West Main street, after the business was purchased by the late William Foresman, donor of the city's beautiful chimneys.

He remained with Mr. Foresman and was named as one of the latter's executors of his estate. Mr. Salter has been conducting the present location as a cigar store on his own account the past eight years, purchasing the business from Mr. Foresman.

Mr. Salter gives failing health as his reason for selling out. The new proprietor, Mr. Wolf, formerly conducted a general store at Kinderhook but a month ago, sold his interests to Joe West, former sheriff of this county.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., Dec. 1.—(INS.)—Fears for the safety of the Pathe-Bray Colorado River exploring expedition were dispelled today when radio advices from Camp Pearson said the party was safe at Lee's Ferry. No reports had been received from the party since Nov. 10, when it left Utah.

Circleville Merchants Are Prepared To Serve Christmas Needs of County; Larger Stocks and Lower Prices

Cold Wave and Calendar Officially Usher in Holiday Buying Season—Large Variety of Gifts From Which to Make Satisfactory Selections Await Inspection of Public.

Thursday's cold wave in Circleville officially ushers in the Christmas buying season. And it's also December 1, another harbinger of the fact that "it won't be long now" until the glad some yuletide.

A little over three weeks from now the bells will ring out with the best season of the year, the time when men and women forget the rush of the world and the every day worries of life in thanksgiving and praise and a strange peacefulness.

Circleville stores this year are prepared as never before to take care of their patrons in the city and Pickaway county. Clerks have been busy for some time unpacking holiday wares and larger stocks have been purchased for this season's buying than ever before in the history of the season, it is estimated.

It is not an absurd statement that many of the stores here have as large a stock as the big city merchants and they have it at reduced prices due to the cheaper rents and smaller cost of operation. All of which means a saving for the customer. And you don't have to figure railroad or traction fare to Columbus or some other city, either.

It's at least only fair to your home-town merchant to give him a chance to serve you by visiting his store now.

Christmas saving checks have been distributed in the city and here's a surplus of money that can go to the purchase of gifts for your sister or brother, father or mother, or sweetheart.

Visit the stores now, buy your gifts before they have all been picked over, wrap them up and put them away for Christmas. Then you can avoid the last-minute rush and enjoy the Christmas season to its fullest.

RED CROSS TO END ROLL CALL

Pickaway County Chapter Will Terminate Membership Drive on Dec. 10.

Closing of the annual Roll Call of the Pickaway county chapter of the American Red Cross is planned for Dec. 10, according to the announcement Thursday by E. S. Neuding of Circleville, county chairman.

More than 60 solicitors in all parts of the county, who are donating their time to obtaining subscriptions, will conduct an intensive campaign to see all of their prospects by Dec. 10, Mr. Neuding said.

The Roll Call has been conducted since Nov. 15, and while good reports have been received from many districts, other reports have been delayed because of unexpected occurrences, such as illness.

Mr. Neuding called attention to the fact that all of the money from every subscription, except 50 cents, will stay in the county to do badly needed relief work here. The 50 cents of each membership fee goes to the national headquarters of the American Red Cross.

It is requested that everyone, who has been overlooked or who was not at home when the solicitors called, to please mail remittances to Mr. E. S. Neuding at 215 East Main street, Circleville, Ohio.

Former residents of Circleville, who may desire to join the Pickaway county chapter, are asked to send their checks to Mr. Neuding, who Thursday received a check for $50 from a former resident of the city.

DUNLAP HONORED

Williamsport Student at O. S. U. Named To Offices.

John H. Dunlap Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dunlap, of Williamsport is having one honor after another bestowed upon him at Ohio State university, where he is a member of the senior class.

He was elected treasurer of this year's graduating class and as such has been named as ex-officio member of all the senior class committees appointed Wednesday by M. Merle Harrod, of Toledo, class president. There are seven of this committees.

Dunlap has been named as one of the two student members of the Ohio State university athletic board, which is the controlling body of the athletic department at the university.

NEWLYWEDS GET BUSINESS, HOME

Boss Gives Bridal Couple His Firm and Then Leaves On Automobile Tour.

EVANSTON, ILL., Dec. 1.—(INS.)—Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence J. Hellstrom, believe they are the most favored newlyweds in the world today, thanks to a wedding present from "the Boss."

The Boss was J. W. Work, who during the past 35 years has built up one of the most profitable real estate concerns in Evanston.

His entire business, including office, fixtures, good will and every asset that comprises "the J. W. Work agency,"—with no strings attached.

In addition, he gave his two faithful employees his pretentious home on Orrington avenue with most of its furnishings.

Then, with a final benediction and wishes for success and happiness, "Ma and Pa" Work hopped into their automobile and hit the trail for the open space.

Mrs. Hellstrom who was Miss Florence Quirk, had been employed by Mr. Work for 16 years; her husband had been with the firm for 9 years.

The retiring "Boss" and his wife will spend the winter at Charleston, S. C., and will then begin an automobile tour of the country that will end in California.

PEPPER BANDITS WITH PEPPER, URGES CHIEF

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—(INS.)—Lesson No. 2 on "how to foil bandits," was given the women of Chicago today by chief of detectives William E. O'Connor. It advised women to carry a package of red pepper to be hurled into the faces of morons and would-be holdup men.

"Throw the pepper and then scream as loud as you can," said the chief.

Lesson No. 1 told residents to leave a light burning when they go out for an evening, thus making it appear to would-be house breakers that some one is at home.

EXTENT OF AUTO INDUSTRY TOLD TO ROTARIANS

R. L. Brehmer, Ford Dealer, Tells What Motor Car Business Means To City.

Nine percent of all the families in Circleville are employed and get their living in some line of automobile industry, R. L. Brehmer local Ford dealer, told Rotarians at their noon-day luncheon in the Beggis hotel dining room, Thursday.

These same employees spend $300,000 in Circleville each year, Mr. Brehmer declared.

"Sixty-seven heads of families are employed directly by dealers," he said "thirty-three families earn their income from independent repair business while 47 families get their income from oil, gasoline and other lines of industry connected with the automobile industry."

$32,000 In Taxes. Thirty-two thousand dollars is spent in direct taxation in Pickaway county by the auto owners.

The auto industry came into being toward the end of the 19th century, the speaker said. Prior to that people had to depend upon the old mare, the livery stable, or walk.

Since then the auto industry has grown until it is the first industry in the United States in the value of manufactured products. It buys more steel and rubber and purchases fifty million pounds of aluminum each year.

"It has always been the ambition of man to cover more territory," Mr. Brehmer said, "and this has possibly been the reason for the growth of automobile. At first it was pleasure, but now the auto is a business and a necessity."

Scores Tax Burden. Mr. Brehmer scored the amount of taxation the motorist must pay.

"Every time it is decided more taxes are needed, the burden is placed on the motorist," Mr. Brehmer said. "The license tax and gasoline tax are two of these items, in addition to direct taxes."

Several new measures to tax the motorist further are being planned right now.

The rural community no longer exists, Mr. Brehmer said. The auto has developed the school, both country and centralized, and has brought the city to the country.

"It has made man have a greater appreciation of the fact that he is an American," the auto dealer declared.

Mr. Ford, he declared, will spend $800,000,000 next year in his payroll and manufacturing business. Fifty thousand people in Ohio are engaged in the industry, although this is not considered an automobile manufacturing state.

Cites Sales Plans. Autos, the speaker said he believed should be sold on a more business-like method. He cited two sales plans now in effect.

He praised local auto dealers for being conservative and sticking in the game on an average of about ten years each, which is much higher than in most other cities.

He denounced calling the industry the "auto game," saying it was a business and not a "game." Ten percent of all of the people in the United States are employed in it and there are 69,000 auto dealers alone in the country, selling an average of 49 cars per year each.

The Rotarians, prior to his talk, voted to give the American Legion a Christmas tree as a community affair.

These guests were present: Judge Harley Whitcraft, Logan; DeWitt Moore, Ralph Leach, Adrian Yates, Hildeburn Jones, Dwight Binns and Norman W. Ralston.

CASE DISMISSED

PLANS TO SWIM FAMED STRAITS

English Stenographer Makes Elaborate Preparations For Gibraltar Attempt.

By CHARLES A. SMITH News Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—All the glamour, frills and publicity of a moving picture stunt will mark the attempt of Miss Mercedes Gleitze, young London stenographer and English Channel swimmer, when she sets out from the African shore to swim the Straits of Gibraltar next month.

"I feel sure I will make it," said Miss Gleitze, who will sail from Southampton for Tangier tomorrow. "My one chief anxiety at present is sharks. I have received a number of letters from persons who know the straits, warning me against sharks."

"But sharks or no sharks, I am going to try. I realize the danger and I realize that my escort may be just the opposite of protection, since sharks, have a habit of following ships."

The arrangements made for Miss Gleitze's journey to Tangier, her stay there and her actual swim provide for something between a visit of royalty and a champion boxer's preparations for a little fight.

A special suite and cabin have been reserved for her on the Rotterdam Lloyd steamship liner carrying her to Tangier. At Tangier Miss Gleitze will be received as the guest of the Grand hotel, Valentinia. The hotel has arranged for a woman champion and a gymnastic instructor as well as providing a pilot boat and pilot to accompany her.

A voluntary escort and a doctor will accompany Miss Gleitze while a moving picture operator makes films of the swim.

WAVES MAGIC WAND

Chicago Mayor Elevates Young Physician.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—(INS.)—From an obscure family physician to the important office of health commissioner of Chicago—at the age of 33—was the experience today of Dr. Arnold Henry Kegel.

He succeeds Dr. Herman N. Brundesen, whose regime began five years ago with the election of former Mayor William E. Dever.

The fairy-book rise to prominence of young Dr. Kegel resulted from a wave of Mayor William Hale Thompson's magic wand. His order to the city council, which ousted Brundesen and installed Kegel, created a sensation at the city hall.

The council confirmed the appointment promptly. Kegel is a graduate of Loyola university of Chicago. For several years he has been personal physician to Mayor Thompson's family.

CHIMNEYS ARE BLOWN DOWN BY GALE IN NIGHT

Telephone and Electric Light Service Slightly Impaired By Storm In City.

Accompanied by a wind storm which blew down telephone poles, tore off chimneys and unroofed several buildings, winter weather arrived in Circleville Wednesday night, ushering in December and terminating the warm weather which had been dominating the city for several days.

The wind made a clean sweep of the roof of the business building on West Main street, which is owned by Herbert Johnson and which is occupied on the ground floor by the John Phillip restaurant and the Lloyd Seward barber shop.

The roof was stripped from the building and piled in the back yard, where it was joined by the chimneys on the structure. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hoskitt and children, occupants of the second and third floors of the building, escaped injury when the ceiling of the top floor followed the roof. The force of the wind was so strong as to blow books about and upset boxes in the rear of the third floor. The damage is estimated at several hundred dollars.

CHIMNEY RAZED

A chimney at the home of Iley Greeno at 218 South Pickaway street was blown to the ground and the roof was removed from the east side of the West High street building, owned by S. T. Ruggles and used by Dr. B. R. Bales as a bulb store room.

Minor breaks in the telephone service were caused by the heavy wind, which blew down three telephone poles on the water works road between the Goose Pound pike and the waterworks station. The poles were replaced Thursday morning.

Lines of the Ohio Utilities company were slightly damaged in the storm. A swinging ground in the lighting circuit for the south side of the city caused the thoroughfare lights to be extinguished for a short time Wednesday night, and linemen were endeavoring to find the source of the trouble, Thursday morning.

The electric company will also replace three poles which were broken off in the gale. Two of these were on East High street near Pickaway street, and the other was on the canal bank. The broken poles were supported by their wires and the electric service was unimpaired.

A heavy rain accompanied the wind and as it grew colder the rain turned to snow in the rural sections of the country, although the farm bureau office Thursday morning had received no reports of any extensive damage caused by the wind in the county.

RIVER RISING

At seven o'clock Thursday morning, local weather observer, Dr. H. R. Clarke, took the gauge of Scioto river at this point, and it measured seven feet and six inches. The river will rise to flood stage by night, according to the word received from Columbus this morning, but there is no danger to growing wheat, as the river will not leave its banks. The rainfall in the past twenty-four hours was 79-100 of an inch.

PLEADS GUILTY

EVERHARDT vs. ERNST.
By DOC REID

Thirty-one years ago today, Jack Everhardt of New Orleans and Billy Ernst of Brooklyn, N. Y., two of the best known and most clever lightweights of the day, clashed in a 20-round affair at Albany, N. Y., in which the New Orleans boy was awarded the decision.

They met again a month later at the finish. In New York City in another scheduled 20-round bout and Everhardt again proved superior by knocking Ernst out in the twelfth round. Both boys were leading contenders for titular honors.

RAILROAD SUES TO GET REFUND MONEY.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has filed a suit in common pleas court against J. F. Bales and Son, hay dealers for $311.21 and interest from November 22, 1926. The suit follows the shipment of hay to Pennsylvania and North Carolina point. The consignors J. F. Bales and Son were refunded the amounts claimed on 20 cars.

Now the company claims the refund was wrong and was erroneously given and were paid in error. The payments were made by the plaintiffs, they claim, contrary to the terms and conditions and provisions of the regular published and filed tariffs covering the transportation of the 22 cars of hay and now they want their money back. Milt Morris represents the railroad company.

MORE SLAYINGS DUE IN CHICAGO GANGSTER WAR

New Bloodshed Expected According To Well Known Figure In Vice World.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1—(INS)—The real "inside" of Chicago's reign of gangsters terrorism was told by a man "in the know" of the racketeers and who formerly was a well known bootlegger and admitted hoodlum.

Chief of Police Michael Hughes, following the attempted assassination of his chief of detectives in the latter's office, issued the most drastic order ever given Chicago policemen: "Shoot to kill and argue afterwards."

Within twelve hours police guns barked and Frank Herbert, gangster lieutenant of "Polack Joe" Saltis paid with his life.

"Gambling and vice are like oil and wet water—they don't mix," was the information conveyed by the informant. "Chief Hughes has been known for twenty-five years to be against organized vice. When he became chief his first orders were to clean up the dives. But in the new political regime there were gamblers, bootleggers and even vice promoters who gained a foothold in their individual districts."

Gangland History.

"The history of Chicago gangland dates back to the days when Dion O'Bannon was killed because he split with Johnny Torrio, czar of the old South Side vice ring. "Scarface Al" Capone was operating the "Four Deuces" near Twenty-second street, combining a saloon with a disorderly house.

"Well, O'Bannon's men vowed vengeance against the Torrio gang. Twenty-six men were killed in the feud which followed. A truce was then declared.

"It was agreed that Madison street (main artery dividing the north and south sides of Chicago) would mark off the territory of the two factions.

"Capone and his ring were to be supreme south of the Madison street from the lake to the city limits. North of Madison the old O'Bannon gang and their allies were to operate.

"Berney Bertsche, for many years a ruler in Chicago underworld affairs but out of the picture for the last four years, came back in control. He was to be director of things on the north side. With him was Billy Skidmore, representing the West Side and the loop, and Bugs Moran, Frank and Vinny Greenberg and a couple of others.

"The North Side group scrupulously avoided any combination that permitted operation of dens of vice. Not so with the old Capone group. Vici in the days of Torrio and Jim Colosimo, had been their biggest money bet and they refused to eliminate it.

Crisis Arrives.

Things came to a head last June. There was one meeting in a loop hotel where there might have been bloodshed and the opening of the war had not cooler counsel prevailed.

"Capone and his gang had two dog tracks operating on the West Side and Barney Bertsche and his mob had one on the North Side.

"The old gangland system of crosses and double-crosses began. Capone men began to tip off the police to North Side joints. The North Side men retaliated by disclosing Capone places. Then the bombings started followed by shootings.

"Half a dozen attempts to get the factions together to patch up the difficulties failed.

"They then tried to ambush and kill Tony Lombardo the other day. He's head of the Unione Siciliano and a friend of Al Capone. They found out the plot in time, however, and then the fireworks started.

"The police are doing their best but what the hell can they do in a private business like that?

"The day Capone and Chief of Detectives O'Connon sat together in the chief's office and faced Angelo La-Mantia was a quite a little meeting. La Mantia had boasted it was he who had placed the ambushed guns in a position trained upon the spot Lombardo was expected.

La Mantia didn't see Capone at first until a detective pointed out the chief. La Mantia turned a sickly white. Capone didn't say a word. He didn't have to. La Mantia today is a marked man and he knows it. In fact he begged police to keep him in jail for protection.

Capone now knows the heads in the plot against his lieutenant. That means more slayings, more blood shed until there is only one gang left. It isn't money or wealth or the racket, anymore. Now it's a question of who can stay alive the longest."

CADDY MILLER SHOP INTERIOR CHANGED

The up-to-date men's furnishings store of Kitty Fissell, commonly known as The Caddy Miller Hat Shop in Circleville has undergone a complete change in appearance in the way of inside arrangements.

The back part of the store presents a new arrangement of counters and display racks, the hat department being moved to the side of the room and long walnut tables have taken their place across the center of the former hat space. This new arrangement makes the display of goods much more effective and gives to the room the appearance of one much larger. It is quite an addition and, will be appreciated by both customers and the store's personnel.

RELIGIOUS SCENES OF BEN HUR COLORED.

"Ben-Hur" now playing at the Met theatre, offers red-blooded entertainment to the many and to art lovers "painting in action" posed from Old World masterpieces. Among these are Leonardo da Vinci's "The Last Supper," Tissot's "Pool of Siloam," Gustave Dore's "The Nativity," Raphael's "Sistine Madonna" and Rubens' "The Holy Family." Color work is employed in a number of these beautiful scenes. Fred Niblo has managed them with a skill and reverence worthy of the "still-life" Masters from whom they are derived.

APPELLANT WINS

In the matter of the ditch petitioned for by Ernest Blaine and others which was allowed by the county commissioners, and from which order, Catharine Lucas appealed to the court of common pleas, has been decided by Judge Clarence Curtin in favor of the appellant, holding that the proceeding has not been brought properly. C. A. Weldon and Abernethy and Simkins represented the appellant and Charles H. May the petitioner, Ernest Blaine.

STUDEBAKER

now holds every official stock car record for endurance and speed, regardless of power or price!

World's Champion Car

25,000 miles in less than 23,000 minutes!

AT Atlantic City Speedway between Oct. 18 and Nov. 4, three strictly stock Commanders each went 25,000 miles in less than 25,000 minutes—total elapsed time. Two roadsters each completed the 25,000 miles in 22,968 consecutive minutes—a Sedan in 24,200 minutes. Nothing on earth ever traveled so far so fast!

The American Automobile Association certified to the time and disassembled the cars following the run to establish their status as strictly stock models.

The Studebaker Commander now holds all official endurance and speed records for stock cars regardless of power or price!

What these records mean to you

This great achievement proves that it is now possible to purchase a truly great automobile at a moderate One-Price price. It proves that The Commander, because of its superabundant power, will perform for many years, eagerly, easily, smoothly and with no labor or effort, any tasks placed on it.

Four basic elements of Studebaker superiority are proved by these world records:

1 SOUND DESIGN—Chief Engineer D. G. Roos, Research Engineer W. S. James and their able associates—backed by Studebaker's vast resources in laboratories and 800-acre Proving Ground—have created a car so superior as to merit its reputation as "the greatest achievement of post-war automotive engineering."

2 PRECISION MANUFACTURE—Studebaker cars are produced in plants equipped for the finest of precision manufacture—cars so accurately built you can drive 40 miles an hour the first day you own one.

3 SKILLED WORKMANSHIP—Studebakers are built by the most skilled and painstaking craftsmen under most expert supervision.

4 QUALITY MATERIALS—Only the highest quality of alloy steels and all other materials enter into the manufacture of Studebakers.

Such value as The Commander—such performance—such championship ability cannot be overlooked by the man who desires a full money's worth for his motor car dollars!

Get complete details
TOMORROW
at Ford salesrooms

FOR several years we have been working on the new Ford car. For weeks and months you have been hearing rumors about it. For the past few days you have been reading some of the details of it in the newspapers.

Whatever you do tomorrow, take at least fifteen minutes to get the full story of this new automobile.

You will realize then that it is an entirely new and different Ford car, designed and created to meet modern conditions—a car that brings you more beauty, speed, quiet, comfort, safety, economy and stamina than you ever thought possible in a low-price car.

Automobile history will be made tomorrow, for the new Ford is not only new in appearance and performance . . . it is new in mechanical design. Many features of it are exclusive Ford developments. Some are wholly new in automobile practice. Its low price is a reflection of manufacturing improvements and economies that are as epoch-making as the car itself.

Nineteen years of experience in building 15,000,000 automobiles are behind the new Ford car and have counted in its making. Resources unmatched in the motor car industry are its heritage and its birthright.

The Ford policy of owning the source of raw materials, of making virtually every part, of doing business at a small profit per car, has cut many dollars off the price you would ordinarily have to pay for a car like this.

So we say to you—learn about this new Ford car tomorrow. Compare it with any other car in the light-car field for beauty of line—for comfort—for speed—for quick acceleration—for flexibility in traffic . . . for steadiness at all speeds . . . for power on the hills . . .

for economy and low cost of up-keep . . . for its sturdy ability to stand up under countless thousands of miles of service.

Then you will know why tomorrow will be remembered as one of the greatest days in the entire history of the automobile industry. . . . Then you will know why the new Ford car will be your car.

HOW ADVERTISING

HAS GROWN

JOHN W. PRENTISS gave as president of the Investment Bankers' association of America, a recent address in which he made a statement of how financial advertising has increased. He noted that 25 years ago the advertising of the great banking houses and institutions was dignified but unproductive. Now they spend annually in the daily newspapers of New York city alone, the sum of $6,000,000.

The members of his organization and of the various stock exchanges spend over $40,000,000 a year in advertising, he said. He predicted that in 10 years, $80,000,000 will be spent annually in financial advertising.

These are very significant figures. They show that this line of business formerly had much less faith in advertising, but that now having learned what it can do, they are devoting a very large sum to it.

The story of success attained through advertising is one of the marvels of modern business. These sums of money would not be spent, unless they abundantly paid for themselves in obtaining new business. By this publicity, dealers in investments are able to sell to people who formerly were not interested in such securities. They show people how they can make advantageous exchanges of the securities that they own.

It is also true that any line of business can expand through the use of advertising. By giving facts and information about any product, people feel that that product is desirable for them and they will buy it. Also when they are given information about goods, they feel more interested in the concern that gives such information, and they feel that it has made a special effort to get the best values in that line. The advertised stores have the cream of business, and they draw trade and money away from the non-advertised goods.

THE PERSONAL LETTER

MRS. CALVIN COOLIDGE, first lady in the land, should be almost the busiest person in the country. Yet they say she finds time to write all of her personal notes out in long hand herself.

The personal letter is not so common as formerly. Many people who used to write long and intimate effusions to their friends, are now calling them up by telephone or sending them a postcard. As a result some friendships decline.

A business man remarks on the time he takes to write long personal letters to his customers. If he felt they were losing a little of their enthusiasm for his goods, he would sit down and write them a long letter, to find out what special features would please their local fields. He said he was paid many times by the greater interest these customers felt.

TWOFOLD REMUS

GEORGE REMUS, the Cincinnati "bootleg king," who killed his wife and is being tried for murder, is one of the most interesting characters now in the public eye.

An able lawyer turns bootlegger, makes millions, serves in several prisons and emerges from all of them immensely popular with the other prisoners and the officials. He then shoots his wife because of real or fancied offenses, and now, on trial for his life, acts as his own lawyer, with his office in the jail where he is locked up at night. Put that plot in a novel or play, and it would be pronounced melodramatic and absurd.

Remus the lawyer, sane and clever, defending Remus the killer on the ground of insanity—that is merely the latest and most dramatic of the contradictions making up this man's life. He maintains that his action is logical enough; Remus, now sane, is defending Remus for a deed he committed while temporarily insane. It is for psychologists and philosophers to say whether that is legitimate and straight.

The legal task now, he says, is good for him. He sleeps in a death cell, but it isn't so terrible as people think.

"Of course it is a damnable business. But in my consciousness now I'm only the lawyer. Remus is an abstract apart from my client Remus. He is something detached, a mere mental identity."

Many a man charged with murder would be glad of the same chance to shift his identity from Mr. Hyde to Dr. Jekyll in this manner, during the strain of the trial.

FLOODS AND FORESTS

ACCORDING to Philip Ayres, forester for the New Hampshire society for Protection of forests, lack of thick woodlands to absorb heavy rains contributed largely to the recent New England floods. Probably this has been a large factor in most of the big floods from which the country has suffered.

Denuded slopes on watersheds throw off rainwater as would a duck's back, says Mr. Ayres, and pour it into the rivers. Plans for flood prevention ought to include arrangements for starting young trees on the slopes that feed the rivers which make the trouble.

THE SERVICE OF STUDENTS

STUDENTS in our schools and colleges do more jobs of public service than is commonly realized. It was a fine thing, for instance, when 900 students of Dartmouth college got out in their old clothes and with shovels and various tools, helped clean up the flood ruins at White River Junction, Vermont. The experience was just as physically valuable as football, and these boys learned something about how the working world lives.

School and college students have received great benefits from the taxpayers and philanthropists of the past. All of them ought from time to time to take hold and promote public spirited enterprises, for the benefit of their local communities.

The RAMBLER

By NORMAN W. RALSTON.

I was just Looking at the Calendar
This morning,
And it gave me a
Shock—
I've already started
In to tabulate
My grey hairs—
So it's only a short
Time until
Christmas and here
I haven't planned my Cards and how Many ties I'll give
My friend
George.
And wondering if I'm
To struggle
Through another box
Of those bum cigars—
Better call them
Alleged cigars!—
Christmas,
Just a few short
Weeks away
And just yesterday
Summer was here
And I was in Shirt sleeves and
Light duck trousers,
And it seems
Old Father Time
Has us on the Run, after all,
Hasn't he—

And what we mean to say
Is,
I've just been Thinking, too, what a
Grand old Christmas
We could all make
It this year if we'd
Just open up our Tight purse strings
And sprinkle a
Little material
Kindness here and There,
Because really money
Is just about the Most worthless thing
In the world if
You don't spend a Little of
It.

We often feel like we wish we'd never gotten up in the morning.

AMBIGUOUS

Dear Norman: Please act as referee in the interests of science. Is this fit to print?

Chickens cross roads and prairies
And chickens cross their knees,
To show the editors watching
That they can do as they please.

—HAITECH, W. Palm Beach, Fla.

Dear Haitech: Much as I would like to act as "referee" in this "contest" of yours, I must respectfully decline. I have never heard yet of any man successfully "refereeing" a feminine match, or contest, if you will. They never came out of the affair without making an enemy. I don't mind making enemies, Haitech, please understand, as long as I am achieving a purpose, a worth-while purpose, but chickens and flappers crossing their knees is something I can't be bothered with. Come again. Try me once more.

DRIVEN TO DRINK

If I'm to be driven to drink,
I declare that I shall not be back'ard

In letting you know that I think
I'd prefer to go, please, in a Packard.

—Ema Spencer, Newark Advocate.

If that were to be our glad fate,
We'd register now a most boisterous
Preference, before 'twas too late,
To go in a manner Rolls-Royce-terous.

—Rody McPhee, Springfield Union

If that were to be our fate,
We surely would hurry the trip,
And so we would make a quick date
With some one who has an airship.

—Adam Breede, Hastings, Neb.
Tribune.

Oh, well, if I must insist
That you might as well start it soon.

And if I must drink I persist
That I do not ride in a balloon.
—Norman W. Ralston, this colyam

If I'm to be driven to drink—
The thought sets my heart all aflutter—

I'll get there the fastest, I think,
If I ride on a revenue cutter.
—Haitech, West Palm Beach, Fla.

BIG PROGRAM FACES CONGRESS AT ITS OPENING

Activity Will Carry Significance Usual on Eve of Presidential Election.

By William K. Hutchinson.
INS Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—A far-reaching program of legislation, investigation, appropriation, election contests and politics today awaited the opening gong of the seventieth congress next Monday.

The activity of the new congress will carry the quadrennial significance that usually goes to a session on the eve of a presidential election. Its leaders predicted a turbulent future, much like that of the sixty-eighth congress four years ago when the oil scandals were first unearthed. Party politics were expected to play a dominant role in as much as the Republicans hold only a paper majority, and cannot legislate without Democratic help.

While the House will plunge immediately into its legislative program, the senate faces the necessity of disposing of the election contests against Senators-elect Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, before attempting legislative activity. Because of this, senate leaders anticipate little legislation until after the Christmas holidays.

Tax Bill Scheduled.

In the House, Republican leaders placed the new tax bill, the $100,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill and the alien property bill on their opening program. Supply bills will have the usual right of way, however, even over this legislation. Flood control, Boulder dam and a farm relief bill were placed in a second group while Muscle Shoals legislation, a new merchant marine bill and a "Big Navy" bill were put in a third group. Unless the leaders are disappointed, this entire program will be enacted by the house before next summer's adjournment.

The senate faces an entirely different situation. Democratic leaders have served notice they will seek to keep Smith and Vare from taking their oaths of office when the senate meets Monday. This will project an immediate fight over seating both men.

The contest may even prevent President Coolidge delivering his annual address to congress next Tuesday, as under the senate's rules, no other business can be transacted until these contests are settled. The rule, however, may be waived to hear the President's message.

Investigations Loom.

Republican leaders hope that both contests will be terminated before Christmas. This would delay the senate's legislative program one month, although some supply bills might be enacted before that by unanimous consent.

A flood of investigations appeared on the senate horizon

A Good Neighbor

Heir to DuPont Fortune Is Popular at Brooks Field; To Live on $75 Salary

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 1.—(U.P.)—A quiet, unassuming young man climbed out of the orientator at Brooks Field here and staggered dizzily away, bestowing a flashing grin on a group of assembled newspaper correspondents as he passed.

"That was Alexis Felix DuPont, Jr.," a reporter whispered to one of the San Antonio flappers who had assembled at the field to catch a glimpse of the new cadet.

The girl's eyes followed the retreating figure of the heir to one of America's largest fortunes.

"Well, I'd never pick him out as a millionaire!" she ejaculated.

"Me either, Miss," a freckle-faced mechanic who overheard her concluded. "I'd figure him for just a darned nice kid."

And that is the way Brooks Field has young DuPont sized up. The Brooks Field cadets have looked him over carefully, studied his tall lank figure, tried to read his blue eyes, approved of the way he combs his hair and voted him just that, for all his money—"a darned nice chap."

The fact is, Brooks Field has taken in the 22-year-old youth from Wilmington, Del., like Paris received Lindbergh.

DuPont is reminded of Lindbergh. He is apparently the only man at the United States Army's large aviation training camp who does not realize what a hit he has made. Even the group of impatient newspaper reporters liked him despite his refusal to answer questions. They failed to convince him that he was "good copy" and he won his request to be an "ordinary cadet."

He did answer a few questions, however. He told the United Press correspondent that he intended to live on his $75 a month salary.

"I don't want to be pointed out as DuPont, the millionaire's son," he said. "I simply want to be known as DuPont, the cadet, and be treated just like the rest of the fellows out here."

He became an aviation enthusiast shortly before Lindbergh hopped off from New York for Paris. By the time Lindbergh landed in Paris, DuPont said he had made his choice between a career of business or aviation. He said his cousin, H. B. DuPont of Washington, D. C., has become interested in aviation and he expects him to become a cadet shortly.

"No, I don't know what branch of aviation I will try to specialize in," he said. "Just now I am spending all my time and thoughts trying to keep from flunking out before I finish the initial training period."

BUY GOODS IN U. S.

Washington, Dec. 1.—(U.P.)—English people are lovers of sport, but they buy a large part of their sporting equipment from the United States. During the last 20 years, production of sporting goods in Great Britain has increased 97 percent, and in the United States 161 percent, according to a compilation of the Commerce Department.

WHAT DOES YOUR HUSBAND DO?

The Preacher's Stalled Car

By CORONA REMINGTON

IT WAS a dreadful night outside. The snow was nearly knee-deep. The wind howled around the corners of the neat little cottage and whistled at the windows as if for admission, but little Mrs. Wingate only drew closer to the cheery open fire and went on with the bedspread she was embroidering, a slight frown on her placid brow.

How long must a widow be a widow before Hildale would consider it proper for her to receive the attentions of men? She pulled herself up with a jerk. That was not the right sort of thing to be thinking about. It wasn't loyal to poor John, and he had been such a good husband, too. As she sat there before the fire, a perplexed expression on her plump, comely face, her needle flying in and out as it outlined the intricate pattern on the bedspread, she even dared to let her mind run over the male possibilities in the neighborhood. There was Elias Bunch, the widower whose farm joined hers, but he was years her senior and had five children. There would not be much happiness there; besides, he had grappled too long with the hard tilings of life to have any fun left in him. No, she would rather think about Tom Wilson, who had the little general merchandise store. Trouble about him was it would be hard to break him into matrimony. The ways of women would be a riddle to him and his way the only right way. No, he would never do.

Mrs. Wingate grew more and more depressed, and the more depressed she grew the faster her needle flew.

"Well, I declare!" she said aloud, stopping in her work and holding up the counterpane so that she could see it the better. "I could most finish it tonight. Won't matter if I do go to bed late."

So it was nearly one o'clock when she finally threaded her needle and went around the last slender, vine-like stem to a flower the roots of which can only be found in embroidery patterns.

Just as she was turning out the light she started at the sound of a smart rapping on the door and upon opening it found Preacher Smithson standing outside.

"Well, what on earth are you doing out on a night like this?" she said, opening the door wider.

"My car got stalled in the snow, Sister Wingate," he explained. "I been out to see the Clayton child. They are looking for him to die, but he was better when I left."

"You're so house you can't hardly speak, and you must be froze to death," she said, drawing another chair up to the fire. "Now, you set right there and I'll make some hot coffee. That'll drive the chill out of your bones."

She hurried into the kitchen and he sat on by the fire, his hands outstretched to the warm blaze, his wet shoes already sending up little spirals of steam.

"Here we are," she said a few minutes later, setting a tray on the table beside him.

Gratefully he sipped the fragrant liquid. "What's worrying me is—about tonight," he said after a moment in an embarrassed way.

"Well, you ain't going out in this storm," said Mrs. Wingate firmly. "You must get pneumonia now goin' by the way you're coughin'."

"But—but—folks'll—"

"Let 'em," broke in the little widow with spirit. "Now, you're going right in that spare bedroom. I started the fire in there already. Ain't no sense in lettin' other folks kill you just for fear of what they'll say."

After she had retired she lay in the darkness thinking about her guest. She had always liked Preacher Smithson ever since he had come to the little congregation in Hildale nearly two years ago. Rumor said that he had been married once but only for a few weeks when his wife had died of typhoid leaving him again alone. Mrs. Wingate believed that he was unhappy for there was a suggestion of tragedy in his deepest, dark eyes.

Preacher Smithson awoke the next morning to the fragrant odor of coffee and sausage. He dressed quickly and hurried into the dining room.

"Good morning," Mrs. Wingate greeted him gayly as she set down a platter of pancakes.

"Martha, I been thinking," he said, "and I'm going to let it go this way. You and I've been sort of compromised, staying here alone—all night together, and I expect we—better get married. If you'll have me, I just downright think the world of you."

He had put a third arm around Martha's plump shoulders and waited ready to retreat or—

At this juncture Martha tactfully helped him out by glancing up at him in her friendliest way. "Maybe it might be—just as well," she said.

She was all ecstasy while he was there but later as she stood at the window watching him trudge through the snow a terrible thought came to her: What if he really didn't care anything about her and had done it entirely to save his reputation and hers? From behind the curtains she saw him imitating his way slowly through the snow; she saw him approach his car, get in and start off.

"Well, I'll declare!" she said happily. "There wasn't a thing in the wide world the matter with that cat!"

Attend Concert

Mrs. C. A. Weldon, Mrs. Joseph Wilder, Mrs. H. P. Folsom, Judge and Mrs. I. N. Abernethy, the Misses Martha and Louise Fismar, Miss Anna Schleyer, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Reichelderfer, Miss Emily Yates and Mrs. George R. Haswell attended the farewell concert given at the Memorial Hall in Columbus, on Wednesday night, by Madame Shuman-Heink. They report the singer in most excellent voice, and the big hall was crowded to capacity. The S. R. O. sign was placed in the vestibule early in the evening long before the venerable singer appeared on the stage.

The great singer received a most generous welcome when she appeared on the stage. The two banners "Old Glory" and the standard of the American Legion, were carried by bearers, and behind them came the singer. As she walked between the two banners the audience fairly went wild and she received the greatest ovation ever given her in the capital city. As encores, she sang the first stanza of "Silent Night," in the German, and followed it with "The Rosary." So perfect was every note that came from the song bird's throat, that she held her audience spell bound, and following the rendition of the last named encore, silence reigned, and the singer disappeared into the night, taking leave of her audience, before they fully recovered from the beautiful ecstasy of her song.

Two Township Basketball Teams Are Defeated by Littleton Five

CLEANERS PLAY ASHVILLE CREW THURSDAY EVE

Rhoades and Eitel Star For Circleville Quintet in Two Practice Contests.

After defeating the Pickaway township team and the Jackson township crew, the Littleton's Modern Cleaners are in excellent shape for their battle Thursday night at Ashville with the Ashville Merchants.

In a cage game, Tuesday night, the Cleaners won from the Pickaway township boys by a 25 to 19 score.

On Wednesday night, the Cleaners trounced the Jackson township crew by the score of 40 to 7. At no time during this game were the Circleville boys in danger of defeat. Eitel made 10 baskets while Rhoades sent five through the net.

In the Tuesday night game, Rhoades made five baskets.

Both games were practice sessions for the real battle at Ashville.

Statistics on the two games:

THE THURSDAY EVENING BOWLING CLUB

ACUMEN OF TEX RICKARD SHOWN IN TUNNEY DEAL

Plea of Promoter Softens Gene's Heart and Loses $115,000 At Philadelphia.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.
NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Just how Tex Rickards was alleged to have "smarted" Gene Tunney out of $115,000 by a midnight telephone call four days before the first Dempsey fight in Philadelphia was revealed today for the first time. The alleged revelation was aired by Bill McCabe, personal caretaker of the heavyweight champion, and it was offered in the way of evidence that purported to support Tunney's claim that Rickard wasn't disposed to treat him in the manner his position in life demanded.

The $115,000, it seems, represented a kick-back from the original contract Tunney is supposed to have held with Rickard, calling, it is alleged for 17½ per cent of the receipts. What the champion admits he actually received was a flat guarantee of $200,000, whereas McCabe claims Tunney would have got some $315,000 if he had insisted upon the promoter carrying out the terms of the contract to the letter.

Goodness Of Heart.
That he did not so insist was due to the goodness of his heart or something, according to McCabe. For Rickard, keeping Tunney standing by a drafty telephone for upward of an hour, is said to have pleaded with the fighter that he, Rickard, was "in a bad hole" with the directors of the Madison Square Garden corporation because they thought he was spending too much on the fight and that, therefore, it was up to Tunney to help him out. This, says McCabe Tunney ultimately agreed to do.

"And," that gentleman added, "All this time Rickard had a virtual sell out. Is it any wonder that we want more assurance now from Rickard that he will produce a contender for a title bout next summer, under the terms of our contract?"
From Tunney himself have come frequent intimations that he was far from satisfied with the way Rickard took care of him in Philadelphia but this is the first time that any member of the entourage has outlined details as to what might have been the cause of the champion's displeasure. The latter merely signified that the displeasure was all his, particularly around the time last winter when he was conferring with Humbert Fugazy in what proved to be a successful effort to force Rickard into the open.

Kick-in Wanted.
The object of all this hocus pocus was to get a contract so favorable that the alleged Philadelphia incident would be wiped out of all memory and it might be said, offhand, that Tunney succeeded. Anyhow, he got a contract that might have netted him $1,200,000 for his bit, so called, at Chicago but the understanding later was that Tunney was persuaded to accept only a piffling million for all that trouble.

This naturally distressed him greatly and what with one thing and another, mostly both, he feels that all has not been Jacob. This, in any case, is McCabe's story. He says that Tunney has come out as an avowed proponent of the kick-in, having had an ample sufficiency of the kick-back.

WILLING TO PLAY Notre Dame Star Offers To Go To Coast.

WASHINGTON, PA., Dec. 1.—(INS)—Captain Smith, star Notre Dame guard, has notified Andy Kerr that he is willing to join the All-Eastern football team which will meet a picked Pacific Coast team in a charity game in San Francisco on December 26. Kerr, who is coach at Washington and Jefferson, is assembling the eastern players.

Flanagan, the Notre Dame back-field luminary, informed Kerr that he would like to make the trip but may be forced to go to Texas, where his mother is ill.

Claude Grigsby, Georgetown center sent word that he probably would be unable to make the journey.

Dwight Fishwick, Yale end, is to let Kerr know today whether he can go.

Eleven other eastern stars already have accepted invitations.

Sportsmatter

BY FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor.
CAMPUS POLITICS.
United Press Sports Editor.
ANTI-OVEREMPHASIS

The most remarkable coaching performance of the past football season was that of Art Sampson who is in charge of gridiron affairs at Tufts College.

Sampson, in his second year as a football coach, decided that there was something to all the talk of "over-emphasis." Maybe the boys were taking it a little too serious. They didn't get enough fun out of it. They came to practice involuntarily from contact with tackling dummy or charging machine. They went into Saturday games with strained faces and taut nerves. They emerged sore and weary, driven to further effort only by sentiment which demanded that they "give all for dear old Tufts."

So Sampson decided to strike out on an entirely new system, one which was all his own. He had the tackling dummy flung into a corner of the gymnasium basement and the charging machine hauled out of sight behind the laboratory.

Scrimmage was reduced to a minimum and abolished altogether once the team found itself. "Tag" football, and games in which prizes were awarded for blocking and perfection in interference, were substituted for the customary training grind. The training table was abolished.

"The kids probably would be sick of each other if they are together every meal," Sampson surmised.

Well, results speak for themselves. Sampson's team was well-trained in fundamentals, rhythm and signals. It went through its schedule without once being beaten or tied.

Undoubtedly a number of other coaches will tend towards Sampson's system next season. Probably none will go quite as far as the Tufts coach who took his squad to the movies or for a hike in Middlesex Fells instead of driving the boys through a severe grass drill.

Johnny Kilpatrick, one of the greatest of Yale ends of all time, told me recently of how the big Blue teams of the past used to loaf throughout the week, nursing their injuries, and then go in and play like demons on Saturday.

It was from something of this sort that the popular expression: "Yale cripples" arose.

The Eli warriors always pretending to be worse off than they actually were, so as to escape practice.

Coaches are finding out that they cannot punish these immature boys too severely all week and expect them to be at their best on Saturday. "A sound man will tackle hard; a sore one can't," said Art Sampson.

The time when a football team should give its best is on Saturday afternoon. Many a team this past season left its game on the practice field.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

TRouble LOOMs FOR MEETING OF OHIO COACHES

Protests Expected From Dissatisfied Schools in Ohio Football Conference.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 1.—(INS)—Ohio Conference football coaches, when they gather here for their annual meeting next Monday, may be confronted with a problem quite apart from the routine matters of schedule and policies—the problem of dissension.

Whether this dissension will break out openly, and perhaps split the conference, or whether it will be silenced and ignored is a matter of conjecture but observers are agreed that dissension, or at least potential dissension, has made its appearance during the present football season.

There are two clearly defined groups in the conference, each composed of six colleges, one group is the southern and the other in the northern part of the state. Both of these bodies are understood to be fairly well satisfied with things as they are. But in addition, there are a number of other colleges which are not members of any clearly formed league and it is from these schools that the voices of protest may be heard.

Two Leagues Form.

The Buckeye Athletic association composed of Wesleyan, Denison, Cincinnati, Ohio university, Miami and Wittenberg, is the southern group. The northern body has no official name or organization but is nevertheless a recognized and clearly defined entity. Its six members are Oberlin, Wooster, Case, Western Reserve Mt. Union and Akron.

When a school from one of these leagues meets one from the other in athletic competition the contest takes on an inter-sectional aspect. Comparatively little interest is manifested by either of the two groups over the affairs of the other. A coach in the northern group remarked recently that he had been informed that some of the schools in the B. A. A. were violating certain Ohio conference football rules.

"But," said the coach, "that doesn't concern us. If the charges were made against one of our northern teams don't meet any of the B. A. A. colleges very often, so it's not up to us to interfere."

Schedules Mapped Out.

Members of each league schedule athletic contests chiefly with other schools in their own group. Tentative schedules for the 1928 football season, for instance, have already been mapped out by both bodies.

Other colleges which are members of the conference, such as Kenyon, Otterbein, Baldwin-Wallace Heidelberg and Hiram, belong to no clique, official or unofficial. They are generally considered weaker in athletics, but that this is not always the case was demonstrated this year by Muskingum, which had one of the best gridiron teams in Ohio. Just how much dissatisfaction is felt by these schools over the present state of affairs remains to be seen.

Finally, there are two colleges in the southern part of the state which if there are to be any fireworks in next Monday's meeting, may be looked to, to provide the spark. It is an open secret that Dayton and St. Xavier are both seeking a change.

Explanations Given.

Both have experienced difficulty in scheduling football games with other conference teams. Three explanations are offered—first that teams representing these schools are "too tough" and other coaches afraid of them; second, that other schools feel that these two do not enforce eligibility rules strictly enough, and third that it is a matter of religion.

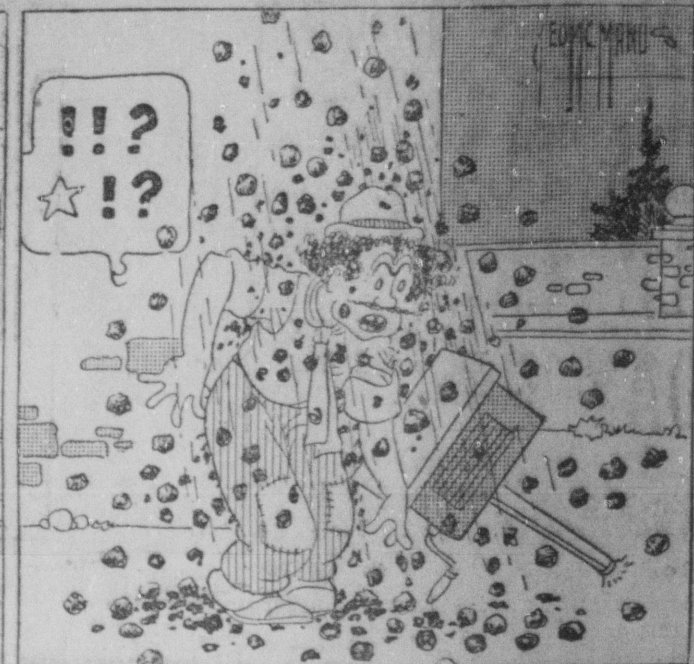

At all events, the two colleges, both of which had football teams this season, feel that they have been discriminated against and prevented from making a proper showing. Joe Meyer, St. Xavier coach, is understood to favor any proposal which will split the conference and place the Musketeers in a better position to schedule games.

There are other points of dispute. The issue of spring football practice, for instance, will probably be brought up again since a number of schools are said to be opposed to the present conference ban on spring workouts. But the problem presented by the two schools mentioned above is likely to prove more embarrassing.

NEW CAPTAIN, JOHN SMITH

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(INS)—John Smith, of Providence, R. I., Fordham tackle, will captain the Maroon eleven next season.

BRINGING UP FATHER

COPYRIGHT 1927 by THE BOBBY-MERRILL CO. W.N.O. SERVICE

The captain, smiling, gave her a friendly touch on the shoulder. "Don't be frightened, little girl," he said. "I'm going to take care of you. I am the captain here. Don't be frightened."

"Th—thanks," stammered Gay weakly, and then, hurried by Ronald who held her hand, she ran, a boyish slim figure beside him, down the corridor to the farther cabin, and the door closed behind them.

Safe in their retreat, Gay faced Ronald Ingram defiantly, chin sturdily upturned, hands in pockets, eyes stubborn. She was not afraid of Ronald Ingram.

"What—what in the—the name—of heaven and earth—," she began wildly, "what in the name—of heaven—"

"You said that once," she interrupted coldly. "Don't be silly." And then she wilted suddenly. "Don't scold me. I—I—feel just—terrible. I—I know I'm going to cry." Then, remembering Rand, she stiffened, faced him furiously again, drove the quiver from her lips. "Where is he," she cried, "where is Randolph Wallace? What have you done with him?"

"Oh!" Ronald Ingram looked white and sick all at once. "Oh, the Cavalier!—So that's it. I might have known. Fool that I was, for a moment I believed it—I thought—I believed you really did come—because you loved me—" His voice broke, and his eyes were smartingly bright.

But Gay was heartless. She caught his arm, held it in wrenching, strong young fingers. "You tell me," she commanded. "If you have hurt—one hair of his head—"

"I haven't seen him, Gay. I don't know anything about him. What has he to do with—us?"

Gay wilted again, broke into soft painful sobs. "Rand, Rand," she whispered through tears.

"Don't cry. Don't. He—he's all right. D—n him. I don't know where he is, but he's all right. Nothing ever—only us poor—devils—who—get—Don't cry, Gay." He put his arm about her tenderly, but Gay wept passionately and would not be comforted.

"What the dickens did you tell him all that for?" he broke in at last impatiently. "Nice mess you've got yourself into. Why didn't you keep your mouth shut, as I gave you a sign? Why do women always have to blab?"

"Why Do Women Have to Blab Everything They Know?"

everything they know? You put yourself in his power by your own words. If he thought you were innocent, knew nothing, he would send you ashore, but now, knowing you have his life in your hands, you are his slave for life. You'll never get out of his sight as long as you live. He wouldn't dare let you go."

"I was afraid of it," she said faintly. "I knew I had made a mistake when I saw his eyes. I was very foolish. I was never—very wise," she admitted pathetically.

"No. But you are—very sweet," he said sadly.

"Help me, Ronald. Won't you help me? You said you—liked me. I only came because I thought—"

"You thought that chap—the Cavalier—"

"I thought you would kill him, so I came—"

"To intercede for him—to save him?"

"Alas, no. I had no hope. I thought you would let us die together."

"I will help you, Gay. It is putting my nose behind the bars to run the risk, but I will do what I can. We must think, we must plan it out. You must pretend to be in love with me—keep away from the captain—fear him more than the men. Gay, I am afraid he will insist that you marry me. I almost hope he will."

"Oh, no; oh, no."

"You could easily have it annulled. Gay, don't be foolish—marriage would protect you—until you reach home. I would not—bother you. Gay, watch the captain. Do not think he would stick at murder? Don't you know that when a man is facing exposure, capture, death, he is mad—quite mad? Well, you mean those things to the captain, Gay, exposure, capture, death. He will keep you in his web like a spider. Remember Blakely—"

"Blakely," she said sadly. "Poor Blakely!"

"You stand where Blakely stood. Watch the captain, and do not cross him, or you'll lie where Blakely lies. Blakely got in a mess—with a woman, too—no wonder Garman rules the women out; we've lost three good men because of them. Well, Blakely tried to swing Garman in to clear himself. You saw the end of Blakely. I tell you, Gay, watch the captain, and do not cross him."

"But, Ronald, I can't marry you. I—I love—I can't marry you."

"Sh!" He signaled her into silence, his manner changed. "I know, dearest," he said clearly, "but don't cry. Don't be afraid of him. We were very wrong to do this, and put him in such a position, but he has promised to take care of you and he will keep his promise."

He indicated for her to take her cue.

"I—I am afraid, Ronald," she said faintly at first, but gaining courage as she spoke. "I—I wish I could go home. Oh, why did you let me come? Why didn't you warn me? He hates me. I know. He looked very fiercely at me. He is handsome, is he not? But I know he hates me."

A brisk tap at the door, and it opened. The captain entered, and, one of the bravest of men, not without his smirk of satisfaction. His eyes upon Gay were amorous.

"Now, I won't bite you," he said, "don't be afraid of me. Just be a good girl and do as I tell you, and—sweet papa!" He laughed lightly at his own humor, then he added briskly, "See here, Ron. You'll have to be married at once. If anybody should come on board to look us over, you smuggled the girl aboard without my knowledge or consent. She is your sweetheart, see? And you did it. So they'll have nothing on the ship. Now if you get married at once it will clear me of any suspicion of complicity."

"Yes sir," stammered Ronald faintly, his eyes pleading with Gay.

"N—no," she gasped.

"Yes. You came for that, did you not?" There was a pause.

"I—suppose so."

"Of course, all this is only laying up trouble for myself. Ronald, who has been my friend, will be my enemy, but I can take care of Ronald. Our doctor is a rank idiot when there's a skirt about, and there'll be trouble with him, and trouble with the crew, and trouble at the ports. But then, I've had trouble before."

He smiled at her. "You are a very pretty girl—and a very brave one. I think it's the nerve of you that really gets me. Worth a bit of trouble, I fancy."

A short rap at his door caused him to pull himself up, impatiently. "Not now, not now. I'm busy," he said sharply, although he barely raised his voice above his wonted softness.

"Sir, beg pardon—it is very important."

The captain, with a bare sign indicating Gay to move back into the shadow of the room and remain quiet, went to the door. A seaman passed him a folded bit of paper on a tray. The captain read it, nodded his head reflectively, glanced back at Gay.

"Send the chief engineer to me," he directed the man.

And then he came to Gay. The companionable frankness of his voice was gone, instead it dropped to its most silky smoothness, a fineness she already learned meant danger.

"Now tell me, who knew that you came aboard this boat?" His eyes hypnotized her.

"Nobody," she said quickly. "I give you my word. Nobody knew it."

"Who would discover your absence, and search for you?"

"Nobody. I am an orphan, an artist. I live alone. The people on the island will think I have gone to New York for a visit. Nobody will seek me. I am a free soul. Ask Ronald Ingram. He knows."

The engineer touched the door, opened it and came in. He did not glance at Gay in a corner. The captain handed him a bit of paper.

"Shall we show them our heels?" The engineer considered. "How are the papers? Everything tight?"

"Tight as a drum. Except this woman—who smuggled herself aboard. But we can fix that up. The papers are perfect."

"Then I say we lay to, and give 'em the gab. What a run for? Then they know it's guilt. Face 'em, and flaunt it, I say."

The captain smiled at him, nodded assent. "You're right, or course. All right, then. I'll be right down."

The engineer went out. The captain came to Gay and took her hand. His voice was soft, his touch caressive.

"Now, Gay, this is your chance. A boat is drawing up to us to look over our papers. You can go back on it if you wish. Would you like to?"

Wild hope throbbled in Gay's heart, beat such a tumult of glorious relief she felt he must have heard his music. But she remembered what Ronald Ingram had said, she was warned by the silken softness of the captain's voice. Still, as best she could the hope that swelled in her heart at the thought of rescue she said faintly:

"Oh, no. Not yet. Can't I wait till I am sure?"

"Are you sure you want to?" His voice was a velvet breath. "This may be your last chance to go back. Are you sure you wish to stay on?"

"Yes, please. I am not afraid now. You will take care of me. I took a chance and came. I'd rather take another chance and stay. If you'll let me."

"Good for you!" His voice was warm and hearty. "I see we're going to hit it off first rate. I'll fix it up with Ronald. Stick to the original story, Gay. You smuggled aboard—under my own bunk—I always tell the truth when convenient—and I didn't see you until I had finished my paper work ready to turn in. I was just going to marry you to Ronald when they signaled us to lay to. Now you've got balance, and you've got nerve. You'll get through it. Right?"

Gay nodded briefly.

"Stay right here. I won't have you up at all unless I have to." He pulled a book from the rack on the shelf and threw it on the table. "Marriage service," he said. "Just ready to read the lines over you. That'll clinch it. Don't be frightened, Gay. They may be only run runners. They're nothing on us. Just sit tight, and—"

he kissed her hand—"I like you. Poor Ronny!"

Then he went out unburiedly, smiling back at her.

Gay turned off the light in the room, got her coat and hat, and crouched by the door which she held ajar, listening. When the moment came, she intended to run out boldly and demand a rescue.

The captain stopped to speak to Ronald, to explain Gay's new status, and the two men went on deck together. Already a small boat manned with twenty men had put out from the coast patrol and was drawing swiftly up to the Roger Williams.

"I—suppose so."

"Of course, all this is only laying up trouble for myself. Ronald, who has been my friend, will be my enemy, but I can take care of Ronald. Our doctor is a rank idiot when there's a skirt about, and there'll be trouble with him, and trouble with the crew, and trouble at the ports. But then, I've had trouble before."

He smiled at her. "You are a very pretty girl—and a very brave one. I

REMUS ON STAND WILL BE CLIMAX OF MURDER CASE

Defendant In Sensational Trial
At Cincinnati Expected To Testify Friday.

By James Kilgallen.
INS. Staff Correspondent.
CINCINNATI, Dec. 1.—The Remus murder trial, already replete with sensational testimony, is nearing its climax.

George Remus, the picturesque defendant, who shot and killed his wife, Imogene, and who is putting up a spectacular battle to escape the electric chair, is expected to take the stand in his own defense tomorrow or Saturday.

"I'm going to tear things wide open," he promised today. "Remus has revelations to make and no one is going to stop him."

Before Remus takes the stand, two "key" witnesses for the defense, and possibly a few minor ones, will testify to what they know of the stormy life of Remus before he killed Mrs. Remus last Oct. 6 in Eden Park. The "key" witnesses are George Connors, Remus' business partner for years and his confidential adviser, and Willie Haar, of Savannah, Ga., whose rum running operations along the Atlantic seaboard a few years ago earned him the cognomen of "Admiral of the Bootleggers."

Will Relate Deals.

Connors, a quiet slender man of about 35 with dark curly hair and unobtrusive manner, will tell how he quit the real estate business and cast his fortunes with Remus when the "king of the bootleggers" came to Cincinnati from Chicago in 1919, how they bought one distillery after another, ran a few thousand dollars up into the millions and became wealthy; how his partner, Remus, was finally jailed for violating the prohibition act, what he knows of Mrs. Remus' alleged unfaithfulness while Remus was in prison and of events that took place immediately prior to the tragedy.

For one thing, Connors will emphatically deny that he took part in any conspiracy to kill Mrs. Remus as charged by the state.

Haar, a slim, blue-eyed, flaxen haired mild mannered Southerner, served time in Atlanta with Remus on a liquor conspiracy charge, and is expected to give intimate details of the alleged intimacy between Mrs. Remus and Franklin L. Dodge, former prohibition sleuth.

Remus Jubilant.

The Remus forces expressed jubilation today over the testimony of John T. Rogers, a St. Louis newspaper reporter. He said Dodge offered St. Louis gangsters $15,000 to murder Remus in Indianapolis during the Jack Daniels case. He said Dodge showed him two pistols in the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, which the dry agent said were "ready for Remus."

He also identified a contract in which Dodge agreed to sell more than 2,000 barrels of whisky said to have belonged to Remus. His evidence was regarded as the strongest in favor of the defense so far given to the jury, and added importance was attached to it because of the fact that Rogers, through his newspaper work, was intimately associated with all the principals in the Remus melodrama.

IRONIC DRAMA LOOMS IN TRIAL

Wife of Murder Defendant To Testify in Behalf of Reputed "Rival" Today.

MAYS LANDING, N. J., Dec. 1.—(INS)—Woman was to defend woman at the Lillendahl murder trial today.

Spectators and jury expect to witness a bit of ironical drama when Mrs. Amanda Beach, gray-haired wife of Willis Beach, Mrs. Margaret Lillendahl's dapper little admirer, takes the witness stand and testifies in defense of her alleged rival. Mrs. Lillendahl and Beach are jointly charged with the murder of Dr. William Lillendahl.

Mrs. Beach, as wife of the accused, is not permitted by law to testify in his behalf, but she can testify for Mrs. Lillendahl as her friend.

She will take the stand after the commonwealth concludes its case today, probably with the testimony of Samuel L. Bark, Baltimore attorney and former showman. The state contends Beach confessed to Bark he killed Dr. Lillendahl with the assistance of a woman.

Harry F. Sanderson, a salesman of Sydney, O., whose failure to make a complete identification of Beach as the man at the murder scene, was a surprise and disappointment to the prosecution, was under a physician's care today in Atlantic City, where he suffered a nervous collapse last night.

Rumors were current in the courtroom that Assistant Prosecutor S. Cameron Hinkle would take summary action against Sanderson and two other witnesses whose testimony caused the state to plead "surprise."

They were Jack Thornbower, young truck farmer of Vineland, N. J., home of Beach and Mrs. Lillendahl, and Henry Nitsche, of South Vineland. Thornbower denied Beach ever asked him to frame an alibi for him and Nitsche refused to identify the defendants as the couple he saw in two parked automobiles at the murder scene.

CLERGY OPPOSES PUBLIC NUPTIALS

Cleveland Clergy Protest Against
Plans For Wedding at Food Exposition.

Cleveland, Nov. 30.—(UP).—Announcement that a public wedding will again feature the annual food show, to be held here Feb. 2-10, had drawn the wrath of local clergymen. The clergy may even actively oppose the ceremony.

The wedding, to be held Feb. 4, according to the Cleveland Retail Grocers' Association, has been a regular feature of past food shows and wedding gifts of every description have been showered upon the couple selected.

Various local clergymen are quoted as follows:

The Rev. John Snape, pastor of the Euclid avenue Baptist church, denounced the public ceremony as "reducing marriage to pretty low levels;" and "any minister who performs such ceremony reflects on the whole brotherhood of ministers."

"A public show of a sacred right," was the opinion of Rev. Charley Louis DeBow, pastor of the First Methodist church.

"Marriage is such a sacred thing that it is not a matter for show," declared Rev. Fred L. Harper, pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian church.

CLEAN COURTS IN DEMAND IN STATE

Turner Says Rural District
Should Be Given the Tribunals They Need.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 1.—(INS).—"Our last election demonstrated that the great majority of the people of this state mean to keep our courts clean," declared Attorney General Edward C. Turner, addressing the Rotary club of Cincinnati at the Gibson hotel here today.

"If the people of the rural communities feel that they haven't courts enough and need some court to take the place of the justice of the peace, we should see to it that they are given such courts, but that the fee system for courts in Ohio should be forever abolished," Turner continued.

"I do NOT mean that costs shall NOT be taxed against litigants, but I do mean that we should allow NO court in this state to be dependent for its compensation, or the compensation of its officials, upon fees earned. They should have definite salaries which are NOT to be measured by the grist that comes to their mills, but, rather, by the population covered by the particular court's jurisdiction."

"Of equal importance is the matter of election," said Turner. "Our election laws should make it easy for the voter to participate and easy, also, to discover the slightest fraud. The nuisance and expense of annual and frequent registration should be remedied by permanent registration, subject to amendment for new voters, removals and deaths, under simple and inexpensive methods."
